

The effectiveness of point of care ultrasound (POCUS) in emergency department

Sumudu Ruhunage¹, Mubashir Hamid^{1*}

1. Emergency Department, Campbelltown Hospital, Campbelltown - NSW Australia 2567

Correspondence to: Mubashir Hamid

*Emergency Department, Campbelltown Hospital, Campbelltown - NSW Australia 2567

Email: Mubashir.hamid@health.nsw.gov.au

DOI: 10.24911/SJEMed.72-1709294240

POCUS has become an invaluable tool in Emergency departments over the last few years. It enables the Emergency Physician to arrive at a most likely diagnosis and start treating the patients within a matter of few minutes which leads to significant improvement in length of hospital stay and reducing morbidity and mortality from complications that can arise from delayed treatment.